I can use fronted adverbials.

What is a fronted adverbial?

A fronted adverbial is a word or phrase at the beginning of a sentence that describes the action after it. It is usually followed by a comma.

Create a bank of fronted adverbials that we could use to describe when, where and how. Have a look at my examples.

When

Late into the evening,
As the sun rose,

Where

Under the midnight sky,
In the depths of the forest,

How

Cautiously, Quickly,

Choose some of the fronted adverbials that you have thought of to write sentences to describe the below pictures. Have a look at my example.

In the depths of the forest,
the boy wandered around aimlessly.

I have written my fronted adverbial in red. Do not forget you need a comma (,) after your fronted adverbial.
